

Charleston Postmaster
Sarah Ann Shelley
Heber Johnson
Wagstaff

Idea:
My talking to Lloyd
Thacker for picture of
Sarah Ann Shelley Wagstaff
& Heber J
Thacker

Mayor Reed Bezzant, d whether the lifts ne beginning of the ay's tranquil pace of or said whatever jobs ent created would pay well and that an urist traffic could tax burden on local y suspicious," added esident Dorse Oman. single advantage." epresentatives said arent company, s USA, would settle ement denying skier ifts from the Heber ountain range.

esident George Han- he represented hun- bers of a group ke Creek Preserva- aid approval of even opment would crack a ntually would be hearing, attended by nearly 100 people, we e against the project, but a few favored it.

Francis Smith, a Heber Valley Chamber of Commerce representative, said the development would benefit the area, and lambasted the opposition for what he said was its "vigilantism," a charge Hansen angrily denied.

William C. Sawyer, a Boston lawyer representing one of the landowners who would've profited from the proposal, said the property in question "will be sold" and developed sooner or later, though he did not say what development interest besides a ski resort might buy so rugged and remote a locale.

Opponents said the proposed lifts would damage the idyllic mountain views from Midway and that area water quality and a 300-year-old stand of trees might also be threatened.

Randy Doyle, area manager of Brighton, said after the hearing that criticism of the project was unfounded because the proposal